National First and Second Line Supervisor Tests

Overview

Stanard & Associates' National First and Second Line Supervisor Tests help law enforcement agencies identify promotional candidates who possess the relevant job knowledge to be successful supervisors and managers. The exams assess candidates' knowledge in areas such as management/supervision, major court cases affecting law enforcement, community policing, criminal investigation and patrol tactics. Both exams are the result of an extensive research and development effort. First, S&A conducted a nationwide job analysis to identify critical first and second-line supervisory duties and responsibilities, as well as the knowledge required to competently perform those duties. Based on the input of over 600 law enforcement professionals nationwide, S&A developed a bank of test questions designed to measure candidates' mastery of key supervisory concepts. Finally, five separate geographically diverse panels of experts, composed of over 50 police chiefs and commanders, reviewed the test questions, contributing their invaluable expertise to refine them.

The end result is two cost-effective examinations that can be integrated easily into your agency's promotional process. The First-Line Supervisor Test measures critical knowledge areas associated with first-line supervisor positions (e.g., Corporal, Sergeant), while the Second-Line Test measures knowledge areas associated with many second-line supervisor positions (e.g., Lieutenant, Captain).

Exam Features

NFLST and NSLST Subject Matter

The NFLST and NSLST are each divided into five sections, which measure essential knowledge areas important for success as a supervisor. A description of each of these knowledge areas is provided below:

NFLST/NSLST Knowledge Area/Test Section	Description
Management/Supervision
First-Line Supervisor	This section/knowledge area covers such topics as effective supervisory practices, interpersonal communication, motivation, leadership, discipline, performance evaluation/management, team-building, organizational change, and labor/employee relations
Second-Line Supervisor	This section/knowledge area covers such areas as politics and police administration, organizational theory and design, leadership, organizational and interpersonal communication, human resource management, stress and police personnel, labor relations, legal aspects of police administration, planning and decision making, financial management/budgeting, productivity and organizational change.
Criminal Investigation	This section/knowledge area covers such areas as general criminal investigation techniques, physical evidence, crime scene management, interviews, field notes and reporting, interrogation and interviews, crimes against children, robbery investigation and the rules of evidence.
Police Patrol	This section/knowledge area covers such areas as the police patrol environment, patrol hazards, patrol methods, force staffing, and patrol supervision.
Community Policing	This section/knowledge area covers such areas as the evolution of community policing, diversity, working with special populations such as the disabled, elderly, and juveniles, media relations, and preventing violence.
Case Law	This section/knowledge area covers key legal decisions in areas such as vehicle pursuit, search and seizure and Miranda rights.

Although there is overlap between the general knowledge areas measured by each exam, the input of over 50 law enforcement executives across the country was used to assign specific items to either the NFLST or NSLST. For example, community policing items which test knowledge deemed relevant for second-line supervisors appear on the NSLST only, while those testing knowledge relevant to first-line supervisors appear only on the NFLST. In addition, the number of items in each section differ between the two exams, reflecting the differing priorities and responsibilities associated with the different ranks. On the following several pages are sample test items for each knowledge area assessed by the NFLST and NSLST. These sample test items provide potential test users with a preview of the type of test content that is used on the promotional exams.
